Instructor and email address: Thomas Maloney, maloney@economics.utah.edu

Core Course Information

GOALS AND OBJECTIVES:

The purpose of this course is to refresh and deepen your understanding of microeconomic theory and models, with an emphasis on neoclassical theory. We will also explore applications and critiques of the theory.

EXPECTATIONS FOR STUDENTS IN COURSE:

To succeed in this class, you will need to attend class regularly, review class materials frequently, gain practice by working problems (we will do a good deal of this during class time), and engage with the additional readings and opportunities for research and application.

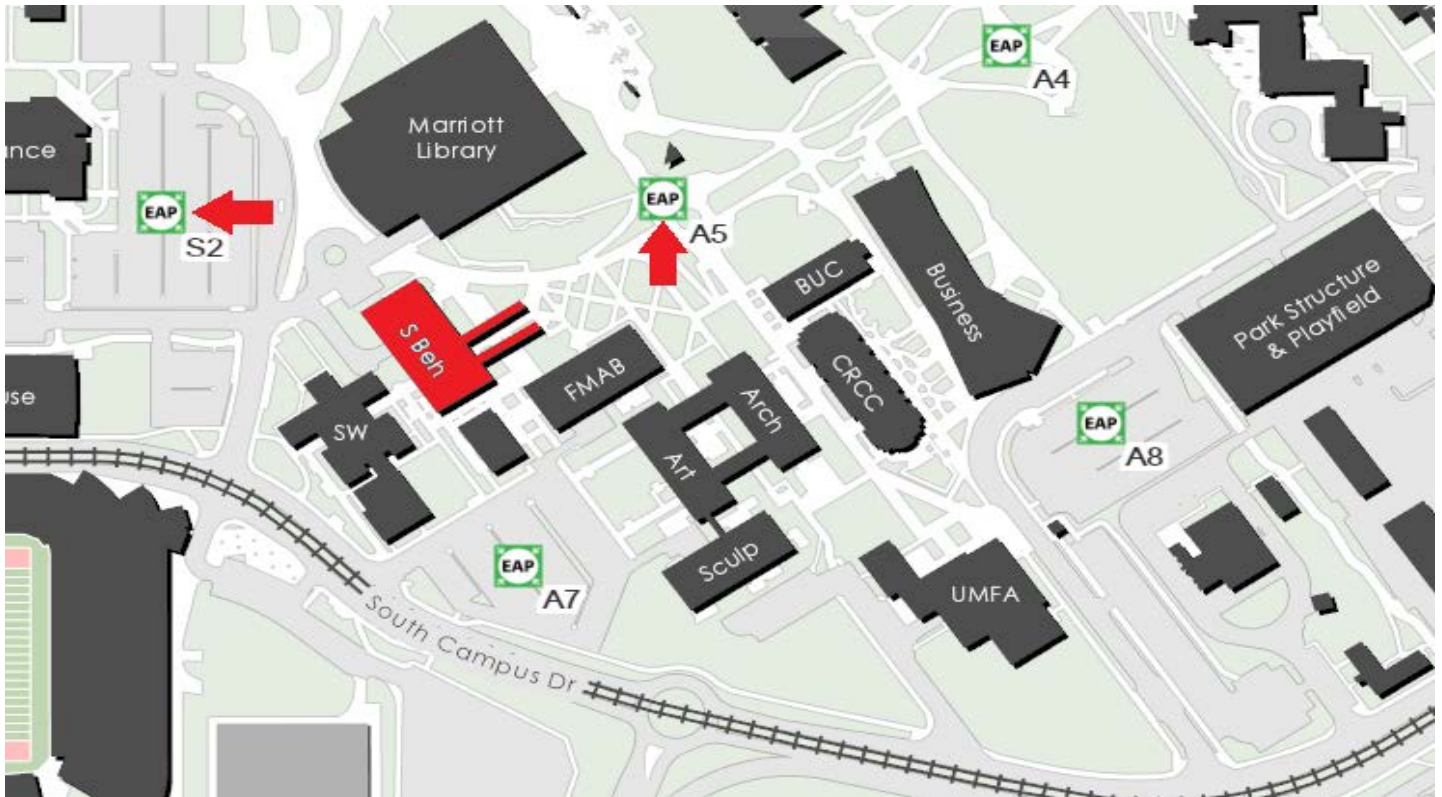

EXAMS/MAJOR ASSIGNMENT PRELIMINARY SCHEDULE:

This schedule is subject to revision, but I currently plan to have problem sets due 9/20, 11/1, and 12/6; exams on 9/27, 11/8, and 12/13; and likely a presentation assignment due 12/6.

REQUIRED/RECOMMENDED COURSE MATERIALS:

I have not ordered a required text for this class, but a good source is Nicholson and Snyder, Microeconomic Theory: Basic Principles and Extensions. I will place a copy on reserve at the Marriott library. Older editions (11th or earlier) are widely available and relatively inexpensive.
